IFD provides evidence-based, in-home services to children and families facing serious safety, parenting, or behavioral health challenges across 35 of Washington's 39 counties. All services are designed to keep children safely in their homes, strengthen family functioning, and improve child well-being. Services are delivered by highly trained therapists skilled in evidence-based practices such as motivational interviewing, relapse prevention, and cognitive-behavioral interventions. Basic necessities, such as food, transportation, or housing support, are provided when needed to promote safety and stability.

As the developer of HOMEBUILDERS® and PACT, IFD provided training and quality assurance activities to public and private agencies in 13 U.S. states and 2 other countries this year: Florida, Hawaii, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Washington, as well as Australia and Canada (British Columbia).

*"It was definitely more of a game changer... than other programs we tried."
- IFD Family*

"I am grateful for [them]... helping us improve our relationship and home. It's peaceful here now, most of the time." - IFD Family

Toni and her daughter, Brittany, were referred after a long period of instability, stress, and conflict. Brittany experienced several major changes in her young life, and Toni was doing her best to parent through significant pressure, limited support, and the impact of her own childhood experiences. Their relationship had become strained, and daily routines often felt overwhelming and unpredictable.

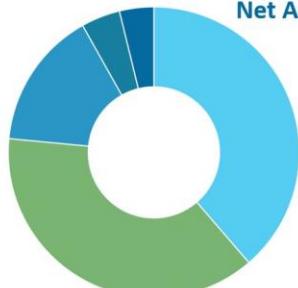

When they began services, Toni doubted anything could help. But over time, they built new patterns together. Through coaching, Toni developed skills to calm difficult moments, support Brittany's emotions, and create more positive interactions. Brittany began responding with greater trust and cooperation, and Toni gained confidence as she practiced new tools with her therapist's support.

By the end of services, their home felt more stable, peaceful, and connected. Toni shared that she now feels better equipped to support Brittany's growth and is more hopeful. Toni said, "I am looking forward to the future. Thank you for helping me to know that I am capable."

"My therapist was made for this job. I have more confidence now and more hope." – IFD Family
